Tips for Small Businesses

Make Sure That Your Business Is Safe:

- Follow the NC Department of Health and Human Services guidelines.
- Follow the Governor's Executive Orders.

Be A Leader:

- Tap into resources for assistance and share with your neighboring businesses.
 - Call Business Link North Carolina (BLNC) at 800.228.8443.
BLNC staff are available Monday through Friday, 8:30 am – 4:00 pm.
Se Habla Español. There are Spanish-speaking counselors.
 - Call volume in BLNC is expected to be high, and callers may need to leave a message and await a returned call. Please be patient.
 - BLNC counselors will gather basic information from callers and refer the case to the most appropriate resource – small business experts with the either the Small Business Technology Development Center (SBTDC) or the state's Small Business Center Network (SBCN) -- for assistance.
 - SBTDC and SBCN small business counselors will assess needs – working, for example, to assist with the preparation of any U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) loan application materials that may be appropriate.
 - Direct employees to Unemployment Insurance System to the following resources:
 - The Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) at: <https://des.nc.gov/need-help/covid-19-information>
 - Website is www.des.nc.gov and the call center is 888-737-0259.
 - Federal Disaster Loans
The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) is known for its flexible and useful lending programs - especially in times of crisis. In the wake of the coronavirus pandemic, SBA has redoubled efforts to administer its Economic Injury Disaster Loan Program. Working with state governors, SBA will fund low-interest loans for businesses and non-profit organizations that have been severely impacted by the outbreak. Loans may total up to $2 million and provide targeted, short-term support to help borrowers compensate for revenue losses caused by the virus. Learn more about the Disaster Loan Program at www.sba.gov/disaster.

- Research business interruption insurance and apply if you qualify.
- Reach out to your Main Street Organization, Chamber of Commerce, and/or Town/City Government for technical assistance, resources, and information.
- Find ways to help neighboring business owners connect and build relationships.
 - Example: Ask community leaders (business, government, education, religious, neighborhood, etc.) who are already “connectors” to help. Have each contact five business owners, for example, and talk about how they can get to know each other. Business owners may learn that the product or service or helping hand they need is just down the street. They may also find businesses that are willing to trade goods and services or delay, or even waive, payment for them.

- Work with neighboring businesses and community leaders to brainstorm new forms of revenue.
 - Example: Work with small business owners to help them identify new needs being generated by COVID-19. Are there products or services that are and could be in demand that existing businesses could provide, at least in the short-term? Ask business owners to participate in brainstorming sessions with five other businesses, for example, to discuss potential business opportunities.

- If you are a property owner, try to offer free or reduced rent for business tenants for a specified period (or defer it). Business retention is a better long-term economic development strategy than business recruitment.

Increase Your Online Presence:

- Tell people if your business is open. Post its status, plans, and hours prominently on your website, social media, in an email newsletter, etc. Also update your Google My Business profile. If you need assistance, contact your Main Street Organization, Chamber of Commerce, Town/City Government, or a local technology business for help.
- Share the business’s commitment to protecting the health and safety of customers, staff, etc., and steps it is taking to do so.
- Promote existing and new product offerings, services and experiences that are available now or will be in the future (e.g. offer bundles items, such as books, puzzles, art supplies, etc., that could keep homebound families busy).
- Develop online shopping list services. For example, many grocery stores offer grocery pickup or delivery to customers who submit shopping lists online.
- Advertise discounts and sales for online orders.
- Sell gift cards for future use.
- Cross promote your goods and services with other businesses to increase revenue for more than one business.

- Share web and social media posts from local businesses through your social media outlets.
- Promote locally sourced products and local supply chains on web and social media platforms.
- Offer a Frequent Buyer Discount Program for 3 purchases per week.

Offer Virtual Services:

- Use technology (e.g. FaceTime, Skype, Facebook Live, and others). If you need assistance, contact your Main Street Organization, Chamber of Commerce, Town/City Government, or a local technology business for help.
- Have live, face to face, interactions/events with customers for buying/selling, responding to inquiries, conducting meetings, etc. (e.g. personal shopper service).
- Livestream educational programs, fitness training, music and art lessons, gallery tours, cooking classes, and more.
- Provide social activities/interactions with and between customers (e.g. a brewery offering a virtual version of its trivia nights or a salon previewing new trends, styles, and techniques, etc.).
- Conduct telemedicine, counseling, and other appointments/consultations.

Increase Communication:

- Write stories about your business to build a personal connection between your business and your community.

Enhance or establish services to:

- Allow for telephone, online, text, etc., ordering and (curbside, back door, or other location) pickup or delivery of products such as groceries, pet supplies, meals, etc.
- Partner with local delivery services or use those offered by larger businesses such as Door Dash, Grub Hub, Uber Eats, etc.
- Offer subscriptions for customers to order and have products such as meals, produce, fresh-roasted coffee, etc., delivered according to a schedule (e.g. "subscribe and save" discounts; coffee of the month; etc.).
